

Help us get the word out!

Respect Yourself, Respect Others, Respect Fair Play

Who we are

We are tennis professionals teaching our skills to anyone, regardless of socioeconomic state, region, gender or creed. The number of participants in our In-School Program has grown from 3,500 to over 35,000 in the last seven years, throughout the lower mainland.

What we do

The Ministry of Education has mandated that effective this school year (08-09) each elementary class should participate in 30 minutes of physical activity. We provide not only specialized programming while we are at the school, but also tools and resources so that the teachers can deliver the programs after our departure.

In addition to serving as a positive role model for the children, our company provides information about the tennis community to parents via the instructors or head office. By ensuring each of these client bases are identified and their needs fulfilled, a stronger bridge can be created between students and a tennis community.

Our vision for the future

The first priority is continuing the growth and improvement of our tennis programs in the Lower Mainland area. With what we have learned over the last 8 years, we can see the program reaching further out into BC and Canada. Through the innovations we are creating to manage this growth, we would like to begin working with other organizations be it sports, arts, whatever can bring people together, and transfer our expertise in creating the framework for these organizations to expand and be successful.

Our values

are outlined by instructors to students, highlighted by a large green banner at centre stage of our program introduction. It is important that these values be present in full view of the class, so that the actions on the court can work toward these values throughout the lessons.

The values that the company expects from its instructors while at schools are also that of respect, as well as enthusiasm as positive role-models. The values that the company holds with the public are of healthy living, fun in sport and community building.

Our role in the community

We aim to empower players so that they can then play with their friends/family but also so they may connect with a tennis community beyond their existing peer group. This is the reason that we are constantly developing new programs, so we can see these individuals through their progression as players. Our challenge is to ensure the accessibility of these tennis programs to anyone and everyone. Each community presents different challenges in making this possible.

... “whose life did you make better because of your presence on this planet? You better have an answer for that” ...

My father (also a tennis teacher) put this question to me in my youth. I realized that tennis is more than just a sport.

It is an activity that brings people linked by a common interest, from any background regardless of creed, religion, age, gender or socio-economic class to create communities together.
